WHAT WE DO

We don't announce startups.
We make them unavoidable.

Every founder has a story. Most tell it wrong. Vesting finds the single narrative thread that makes a room lean in, then engineers content around it until the story is everywhere it needs to be. We've turned pitch clips into YC acceptances, carousel hooks into million-view moments, and raw founder energy into the kind of storytelling that moves cap tables.

Seven launch stories. One pipeline unlock. 5.27M+ views.

Thirteen founders across seven teams came to Vesting before the headline. The launch stories drove viral reach; the pipeline story turned one post into real ARR conversation. Same job throughout: traction that changes a trajectory.

Startup views are organic and verified from platform analytics; excludes paid distribution.

YC acceptances are confirmed by founders across Spring & P26 cohorts.

Zaranna AI · founder, Tarun Vedula

One post. Thirty calls. $300K in pipeline.

Tarun was building Zaranna AI in stealth-quiet — a YC company with a clear thesis and no megaphone. Vesting ran one post on Instagram. Within days the inbox didn't ease up. 30+ inbound calls came in, each one expanding a different use case the team hadn't even pitched yet. The pipeline closed at roughly $300K of ARR working — from a single post.

Tarun Vedula

I think we had like 30+ inbound calls spanning different use cases and about 300K ARR in pipeline generated from this single post

PROJECTX · YC

ProjectX · founder, Rounak Adhikary

A pitch that reached 3.6 million — and crashed the servers at 1 AM.

Rounak didn't file a press release. He pitched ProjectX on Vesting's Instagram — content engineered to move, not to inform. The post hit 3,612,440 views, 240K likes, 60K shares, and accumulated roughly three years of combined watch time. Signups overwhelmed the stack. Weeks later, accepted into Y Combinator — social proof money can't buy.

Lance · founders, Caleb Chan, Gatik Trivedi & Gavin Brennen

A $3.7M raise became an inbound engine overnight.

Lance builds AI agents for hotel ops. The raise needed to generate inbound, not just inform. Vesting built the announcement for the algorithm — bold visuals, one hook, engineered for distribution. In the first day: 186,585 views, 2,363 profile visits. A post that behaved like a channel.

Rayan was building Enjamb Labs in stealth — no audience, no launch post, no footprint. Vesting filmed the debut and shipped it. The post compounded: 161,000+ views, deep engagement from the technical community, and inbound from the exact people Enjamb wanted to reach. Weeks later: accepted into Y Combinator.

VENTURE VLOG · YC S2024

Corgi · full-stack insurance carrier for startups

A startup HQ walkthrough that turned Corgi into a 100K-view story.

Corgi is a YC company building faster startup insurance by underwriting and issuing policies directly. Vesting treated the office like the product: the cafe, the operating tempo, the founder energy, and the reason the company felt bigger than a policy quote. The result was a long-form Venture Vlog that made the culture and category legible in one watch.

A climate-tech walkthrough that brought investors into the inbox.

Kind Designs builds 3D-printed Living Seawalls that protect coastlines while creating marine habitat. Vesting turned the product into a field story: the machine, the seawall, the mission, and the founder behind it. The Venture Vlog reached 75K views, and the founder said investors started reaching out after the post.

Attention has a market price. We just don't pay it.

Buying Q1's 14.58M views as paid media would have cost roughly $160,000 — before a single YC acceptance, angel check, or inbound call. Vesting doesn't buy reach. We engineer stories the feed wants to carry, and the outcomes that follow don't have a rate card.
